2019 Legislation: Mentally Ill & Homeless Among Expected Topics

In preparation for the 2019-2020 Legislative session beginning on January 7th, legislators both returning and new gathered the Capitol in December for their swearing-in. At that time, returning members were allowed to introduce legislation they intend to take up in 2019-20. The handful of public safety bills introduced looked and smelled like extensions of 2017-18 attempts. One bill even goes so far as to change verbiage referring to mentally ill persons. And so, it begins.

DOJ Releases 2nd Annual RIPA Report

The Racial and Identity Profiling Advisory Board (RIPA) created by AB 953 in 2015 submitted its second annual report on January 1, 2019. Information included in the report this year includes details on how stop data is collected and submitted, best practices for agencies drafting reporting policies, data on civilian complaints, and data reported to DOJ from law enforcement agencies. Agency policies are suggested to include definitions of key terms, including “bias-free policing,” and the report even details how agencies large enough to currently start reporting stop data are submitting the info to DOJ.
The entire report can be found here.

TSA to deploy more floppy-ear dogs because they're less scary than pointy-ear dogs

WASHINGTON — In its effort to make the airport security screening process faster, the Transportation Security Administration is employing new high-tech baggage scanners, facial-recognition cameras and “automated lanes” to eliminate passenger gridlock.

But TSA Administrator David Pekoske said the agency is also making at least one new change to reduce traveler stress: deploying more floppy-ear dogs, rather than pointy-ear dogs, to sniff out explosives in public areas.

How intelligent computing can help win the war on crime

The rise of the internet over the last 20 years has enhanced our lives in many ways. Online technologies have made it easier to find and buy products, learn new skills, get directions, book a hotel room, discover new music – even watch an entire season of a TV show in a single weekend and get recommendations on other shows we might like.
